news story April 19, 2007 — For the first time, investigators are saying the chemical that has sickened and killed pets in the United States may have been intentionally added to pet food ingredients by Chinese producers.

Food and Drug Administration investigators say the Chinese companies may have spiked products with the chemical melamine so that they would appear, in tests, to have more value as protein products.

i taught my cat to cook so now it feeds itself....

no seriously... dry food only. and i read like 5 articles and went to the websites of the companies in order to determine which ones were selling the tainted food... would rather loose 3 hours of my day then my pet

Even though I'm Chinese myself, I have to admit I'm really mad about the food made in China. Every cooking product I use I'm suspicious of any chemicals they might have put in it .

Off topic but this makes it a possibility that the Chinese also did the anthrax scare too?
