Renhelp will definitely help you with some details and more advanced techniques, but there's no better way than to jump right in and start exploring gmax. Get your feet wet, and then look through the forum and renhelp.

If you really want to get the job done you will need 3ds Max 8. Gmax will just hold you back from all the wonderful features and what is currently being used by the power users of renegade modeling. Plus Gmax is what? 3DS Max 5? 4? Either way its ass old and needs to be delt with.

After someone converts all the bones, tutorial files, help files to max that is

...oh and makes it free for people...but that can wait, im sure.

That is a tutorial for a basic map in 3ds max 8, needs to be remade but see the difference between gmax.

I also suggest the video tutorial on www.renhelp.net - It's the best tutorial out there.
