They were salvaged. They are in a format that requires us to write a custom program to import them. I am working on it, and they will be back soon.

So how will this work? Will they all go back into this forum? or will there be a Mod Forum Archive or something for them to go in?

I vote archive.

If there is a good deal of recovered threads put them all in a seperate forum called archive. So the import does not intrude with current threads. I.E. Bumping all the latest ones to the last page.

I agree aswell the mod forum was one of the biggest forums and if they were put in this forum they would mss it up especially with all the member names.

I vote archive as well, for the most part we don't even need them. but an archive wouldn't hurt. just in case. thanks Blazer.

were you even a member at the old Official Forums Captkurt? "Not Like We Need Them" I'll agree to put them in an archive, But there is a great wealth of information there. To say we dont need it is to say we don't need these forums to communicate with the entire community.

You tell 'em!

The mod forum was full of very good tutorials and information and such.
