I just didn't change mine from the default, cos when i installed windows to begin with, it was meant to be just for gaming, cos i have linux on a dual-boot.

Well, I'm on my 16" miscoulored monitor that I usually use as a secondary because myu 19" primary quit on me. So, here is my lower res than usual desktop:

It's just the earth texture that comes with 3ds Max 9.

BTW: I posted a desktop thread less than 8 months ago, and no-one really cared for it at the time.

BTW2: Sir Phoenixx, can I have the image you are using as a background?

My experiences with Vista aren't so good.

1st install > BSOD on boot-up for ages
2nd install > Drivers kept hanging
3rd install > nVidia ForceWare's full of bugs; window borders keep refocusing

People say it's because I have a crap computer, but I can run XP, Server 2003, Ubuntu, Arch, Fedora and MacOS X with no problems at all. (Well, MacOS needs some kexts to work to full potential)

1.5GB DDR4000 SDRAM

You need a faster hard drive, I'd imagine, it seems that no matter how much RAM you have, Windows wants to use the page file...

Turn the detail off and went for Nvidea to release Vista ready, working drivers.

Nah, seeing as all of my games run at about half the speed they do in XP (and yes, I've tried all the tricks like disabling SuperFetch, although it annoys me that these things have to be done in the first place) I'll just stick with an operating system that I actually don't dislike (XP). The second I get some proper free time I'm going to install Ubuntu x64 off the LiveCDs I just got posted () and then marvel at how the 3d effects are somehow much better than anything Windows can offer*.

* Better, but utterly pointless, and that's why I love them!

Firefox, aol, recycle bin

Aol for checking my mail

Firefox for surfing web....and recycle bin......

then I have a objectdock docking station which loads instantly when i login, it has skype, nero dvd bining software, the time.

what the heck, you guys have like 100000000 icons lol, ever heard of making folders or using the recycle bin? You guys remind me of my uncle who recruits people online, he has a clean documents folder, then all his "documents" on his desktop, even people he recruited years ago, he still has their files on his desktop lol.

I use Vista and I have not had a single problem with anything. Even RenGuard 1.03 with SVKP worked fine the first time.

I have no problems with
* Google (lol who the fuck started the rumor that vista cant fucking web browse to google? you are an idiot whoever you are)
* Renegade + RenGuard
* Teamspeak2
* BF2
* BF2142
* The Matrix Online
* Nero 7
* MS Office
* ITunes
* WinAmp
* Command and Conquer3
* Supreme Commander w/ dual monitor mode
* Firefox

All of the above and more work flawlessly, no compatibility mode shit etc...so don't believe the "OMG you can't run anything with Vista" haters talk.

Hardware:

Intel dual core E6400 Overclocked 30%
BFG GeForce 7950GX2 (1GB RAM, SLI)
Asus P5W DH Deluxe motherboard using digital audio

Not saying Vista is great or that everyone should upgrade...I'm just saying that I have so far had no problems whatsoever. The only thing I highly recommend is turning off UAC as all the prompts to "protect" you, get annoying real fast.

Ah, but if you run FRAPS on games like BF2142 in XP, then in Vista, are they the same speed or faster? That's why I didn't stay upgraded.

Quote:The only thing I highly recommend is turning off UAC as all the prompts to "protect" you, get annoying real fast.

Oh yes, I think the entire world is unanimous in saying that. Any Vista computer I've used for any length of time I've turned it off, whether or not it's mine.

I have no idea what either of you are babbling on about, I've been using 1.7.1 for ages (well, since it was released) and not noticed anything strange.

Metallic Shades

es +2.1.1&hl=en&ct=clnk&cd=1&gl=nz

Uses the hacked XP Theme DLL to work. It only works on dual monitors because I paid for Ultramon, but it was worth it.

Do you really think Ultramon is worth $40?

It's good, but it's not worth $40.

Also, thanks for the theme, it rules.

From Ultramon's website:
Quote:Trial version limitations: the trial period is limited to 30 days, the software is otherwise fully functional.

I think you're thinking of Multimon.

I honestly do, considering I use the PC daily and it makes using dual monitors so much easier than Multimon or nothing else I worked it out on a cost-per-day and decided it was well worth the cost.

Plus I can install it on my laptop + desktop. It makes running my laptop in dual-screen at uni really easy. (You either buy a license for users or systems, whichever is less).

I've thought about purchasing Ultramon, but its pretty expensive for what it does.

Yeah, but I see myself using it daily for quite a while.

Plus it integrates with my theme, it's being actively developed and the developer answes the support forums really quickly.
