Most vehicles are available in real life.
Aside from the Stealth, Flame, Orca.

Apaches are just Commanche Helicopters.
Orca's, if im not mistaken, are on their development stages.
As their engines are the hardest part.

(obviously not called orcas you nads)

Anything else im forgetting?

Yes, Apaches do exist.

Infact in Red Alert (and in APB), they used a LongBow, which is an actual helicopter in the Apache family. It isn't a fake type of helicopter, it is real.

Err...flame tanks are real. We just don't see them made in the exact mechanical configuration of the Nod flamer from Renegade.

M67 Flame-Tank (United States)

Churchill Crocodile Flame-Tank (United Kingdom)

NOTE: Any current Main Battle Tank (MBT) can be upgraded with flame equipment/weaponry thus effectively voiding the immense costs of having a seperate vehicle for such missions.

Youtube has a nice "documentary" of several helicopters:

Check the "Releated videos" on the right for the other parts.

GDI-----

Hum-vee- 'High Mobility Multipurpose Wheeled Vehicle 'm1114'

APC- 'm113'

MRLS- 'MRLS M270'

Med tank- 'M1 Abrams' proolly

mammoth tank- 'X66 Mammoth as itself' a tank that gets close is the 't-35 in WW2'

NOD-----

Buggy- Ren version i dont know, but in the tib dawn, they were 'dune buggy's'

Artillery- 'G6(-52L)'

APC- Hard, i think its a mix between apcs, but the best 'clones' are the 'Pegaso BMR' and the 'Grizzly apc' (USA apc)

Light Tank- Ren version i dont know, but in tib dawn they were 'M2 Bradleys'

Flame Tank- The hole thing (concept) does not consist, but the tank is based on older flame tank in WW2 m-67 proolly.

Stealth Tank- I rilly couldnt find anything based on this, self created proolly.

Both apcs are not even close to BTRs and the x66 doesnt exist.

M67 Flame-Tank is based on the Cold-War era M60 Patton battletank...not WWII era machinery.

Also, flame-tanks are weapons that need a specific environment and a respective combat threat to be used. For example, they were used in Vietnam to decimate forests to smoke out the hidden enemy but it would be useless in Iraq today due to the urban nature of warfare.

Also the massive costs of fielding a single-function vehicle such as a flamer is simply too high.

That's why a exclusive flame-tank is not in use today but any durable military vehicle (preferably tanks) can be upgraded in case a flamer is needed.

Forgive me, i didnt even searched it up but i thought they were WW2 tanks, as in WW2, you also had T-34 flame tanks, so i though they were late 1945 USA tanks.
