The guy does his job and gets fired.

I find it ironic.

Gamespot now sucks.

I found that gamespot always sucked.

But getting fired over doing his job, suck.

I'm sure there are other reasons for this. But then again, these sites rely on advertisers, and gaming companies, so it doesn't surprise me at all.

Exactly! Gamespot is my premier site where I check up on games and read up on reviews before making any purchases.

And now it sucks just because a company can't bear to see their game get a poor review?

DAMN RIDICULOUS, THAT'S WHAT.

Here's a link to the review: Funny lol

I mean, The guy is a little harsh on the game, But that's because what he said looks true.

EDIT: Here's the video review: <http://www.gametrailers.com/player/usermovies/137943.html>

Quote:as his scores of 10 for Tony Hawk's Pro Skater 3 and 8.8 for The Legend of Zelda: Twilight Princess

He made his own bed, I would of fired him the second I saw this score comparison.

He gave a bad review to a game that has been heavily advertised on the site. The game's company gets pissed, Jeff gets fired and his video review gets pulled.

I liked Gamespot until I saw this. Then again, I only ever read the reviews, didn't really pay attention to anything else. Since these guys are obviously biased, what would be a good site for reviews and the like?

Most of them are biased, Your better of downloading the demo / watching in-game footage and deciding for yourself, Or

I prefer getting my reviews from G4TV, Xplay is very honest. Sometimes they do make a mistake, as in the NWN case. But they did make a new review covering the toolset side of NWN, but they were right about the offline game. The mistake they made was not looking at the toolset before they made their comments.

This guy did screw up with the tony hawk and zelda scores, and the company shouldn't have fired him, that is a PR nightmare. The company should have twisted the story so it looks like he made his comments on what they wanted, to let the fans think the company is still about them.

I only visited Gamespot for Jeff and Kasavan. They fired Jeff for telling the truth about the game, basically doing his job.

I'm switching to IGN.
