Unfortunately this is how it works. One generation start the modding, then leave, the next generation begins modding when the original generation become pros, everyone eventually moves on to other things after they become pro's.

Instead of arguing, how about a "thank you oblivian, you've been great?"

I'll take the lead:

Oblivian, I do not know you well at all, but from what I've heard and from what I have seen, you've been a good addition to the renegade community.

I trust you will be sorely missed.

Good luck with the things you will do after this.

Take care.
