I bought this for 470 dollars from a woman on ebay, she sells these suits, and ever since I was young, I wanted to be a stormtrooper. Never could buy one until now because of my height, now I am 5'8" and tall enough, I got one.

It fits good, except I need to redo the strapping on the arms, they seem too low or too long, not sure. They just dont fit conformable when wearing it.

Over all, the suit is comfy to wear, nothing hurts or makes me feel like "I CANT MOVE PLZ HELP"

So far been building this kit since last friday night. Almost all done.

Helmet wasnt padded, so it is slanted in the photo.

Yes I am a star wars nerd fiy.

Thanks! When I first made the helmet, I freaked out thinking it was too big, but everyone I talk to when wearing it as a test says it looks normal, I still say it is slightly too big, but if I grew another inch or two, I'd be ok, it is still usable.

Usually I'd come in with a Clerks joke, but damn is that cool.

P.S: How is your Halo suit coming along?

I'm hoping tomorrow I can go to the hardware store to buy padding and screen mesh to finish the helmet, I need this suit done so I can troop on new years.

Honestly. Yea, I'm not a big star wars fan, but I don't think it's sad.

This is bad as you buying a picture, and what's wrong with that? They can have their obsessions, you can have yours.

You could also say buying Renegade or buying any game is a "waste" because it does nothing "productive". But, you like it, so you bought it anyways.

Anyways, that's pretty cool. Get a bunch of other people in storm trooper uniforms then raid a party

I have a masterchief suit also, It is full and I custom made it.

It's plastic, resin, fiberglass. Very sturdy and heavy.

I prefer my stormtrooper suit though, looks more professional and cooler, plus, everyone recognizes a stormtrooper, cause star wars is BIG.

This coming from a guy who rides a scooter, and installed a WarCraft server on someone else's hardware.

Even though it is cool, I can think of a million other things that $500 could be spent on.

Laptop, new PC, ipod touch, car stereo, LCD TV, etc.

All Possible, but...I dont need them, I have them already....plus, I've been wanting this suit since I was like 7.
