How realistic would it get you think?
and how far are we away from that?

I'm actually willing to bet that in at least 30 years, people will still be using screens, and controllers.

They'll probably be bother Virtual Reality games and controller games =P . They'll probably be an audience for both. Plus Virtual reality could probably help in training for various things. Let's hope we don't get a more realistic version of Trauma Center and then have kids trying to operate on other people O.o .
