Listen up all you Plecos-Posters. We (the moderators and most of the forum-goers) are sick of seeing you poop all over every post that is made.

Crimson tried giving you a spam forum, in hopes that you would go there to post your "funny" pictures and leave it out of the rest of the forum, but apparently your goal is not to share funny pictures, but rather to ruin conversations in the other forum sections.

Thus this is malicious and willing disregard of the forum rules and so I'm stepping in. You cannot say you had no warning as I have posted several warnings and locked several threads. Seriously, I am fairly surprised that you guys even spam the Hot Topics forum, the one place where people are expecting halfway intelligent conversation. Crimson, I, and the moderators are tired of having to warn, move, and delete pictures of plecos, llamas, and such every 4 hours from the forums.

That being said, since you subtle warnings are obviously not enough, the first people that are currently banned are:

Canadacdn: 1 day [Edit: He thought he would be a smartass and PM me plecos pics...extending ban to 1 week. Have a nice day.]
RenX: 1 day

I will increase the ban time depending on the amount of spam and previous bannings or warnings. You are still free to spam in the Spam section of the forums (note that it will be periodically wiped so doesnt count towards postcount).

Note: I'm not saying nobody can ever post an image. I think we all, in our collective common sense, know exactly what is spamming and what is not. To clarify, if you are talking about race cars and want to post an image of your car, that's fine. If people are talking about how religion has touched their lives and you post an 8MB picture of a damn fish, that is spam and you know it.

This "policy" is not set in stone. If you don't like it, take it up with Crimson, but I doubt she is going to say "Oh sure splatter the forums with Plecos's"

In my most humble opinion, I think the bans are a little bit overreacting. The pictures had a purpose that they served for a while. Then the rest of the forum caught on and basically stole the whole thing from Canadacdn. That's why you've got the spam of it.

People see something even remotely unrelated and pick up on the opportunity to make some giggles and posts it.

tl;dr it used to be good, but faggots ruined it.

Edit: Upon reading your edit, it seems like Canadacdn feels a little the same way.

Its not overreacting to put a stop to people spamming EVERY post that is made with fucking fish pictures, most of which are 4-5MB in size which takes most peoples browser a long time to load (compared to the rest of the forum text).

Due to a lot of work by the mods, the rest of you don't see most of the spam, but we are tired of cleaning it up.

I personally have tried warning people, locking threads, deleting the spam + sending a warning PM, moving spam to the spam forum...what do I get? More and more spam including sending them to me in PM.

So guess what....Ban hammer. If you don't like it, then just post a plecos and I will make sure you take a break from the "oppressive admins".

There's no sympathy from me here. I made you guys a spam forum for that shit and you still insist on throwing spam in every damn thread. You're making people not want to come here and not want to read threads and that's NOT acceptable, period.

Blazer, I think you misunderstand the goal behind posting huge pictures of Plecos. The idea isn't to spam or to cause brower lag--Those are just unfortunate side-affects. Because the moderation cannot be everywhere and review everything, Plecos "Spam" is a sort of citizen's lock. Once a topic reaches the point where it's just "lol no u suk" back and forth between Surth and Troop, something has to be done, and that something is Plecos.

But, eh. Rules are rules, I suppose.

It was meant as the non-mod lock, and therefore, they were posted so the topic WOULD get locked.

Then everyone else caught on and started being douchebags with it, just like anything else that's funny.

Remember cat pictures? They used to be hilarious, until every 11 year old idiot who illegially downloaded photoshop from utorrent while learning how to masturbate using a guide also downloaded from utorrent started posting them.

Same situation here.

How I look at it, Plecos and quote pyramids were used by a lot of people to end a useless topic that would need to be locked anyway. A lot of which were just useless topics made by Rocko or Ferkhat, and since moderators don't always arrive on time on these forums, people would just post Plecos to kill the thread.

There is a "report" option, whereas if a couple of people requested a thread be locked or that a moderator look at it, would do the trick. There is no need to post huge pictures in order to "stop" a lame thread from continuing. That would be like your mom coming in and taking a dump on your pillow to convince you to clean your room.

1. Yes there is an ignore button, but we are just supposed to ignore everyones complaints about the spam and just tell them to ignore it? For fucks sake 2 days ago a poll was started by people complaining that the mods were not doing enough to remove spam, and now you are complaining that stopping the spam is oppressive?

2. How clever of you to post a giant (1280x968) picture of your browser. I know you are just hoping I will ban you for it so you can say that it was unfair because the picture was about the topic at hand, I have half a mind to do exactly that, but I try not to feed the emos.

People complain about stupid topics that should be locked anyway, but maybe instead of posting idiotic pictures, they should just ignore those topics, and not keep them alive.

Seeing bullshit in the 'Hot-Topics' area miffed me, because there were some discussions in there that were pretty good, and got ruined by a couple of retards.

I'll be happy to see less idiocy in the future.

I've lost count of how many times i've used the 'report' button to get a thread locked because it was either created by an idiot who was just trying to increase his e-penis or because it was just spam created by a troll. Not once did I see any of the reported threads locked.

To the topic at hand, it's about time that the admins/mods actually did something useful to stop the spam.

In every section except the spam section there is a "file attachments" section right below the "body" section. In there contains a white box with a "browse" button and an "upload file" button next to it. You can browse folders, find the pic you want, and the upload it. Unless something is fucked with my account (which is possible) that is not the case in the spam section.

Right, but then we have to wait for a moderator to get on. It's no faster and only slightly more efficiant than letting nature take it's course and letting a moderator find the thread on their own. In some cases, the thread lives out the rest of it's twisted, natural life by the time that happens.

On the mom taking a dump thing, good analogy, and if my mom did that I would DEFINATELY clean my room, immediately.
