Flank. Come in through the back entrances, cover the engineer and let him plant some C4 in the power plant's MCT. Let about two or three people rush in and shoot up the war factory and other buildings. Let the enemy engage them. If they've distracted the enemy properly then the power plant should go down. Base defenses shut down when a power plant goes up.

2 other ways of doing it is:A few tanks can attack at the same time and simply shoot it down, that's what happens most of the time I'm playing.A single stealth unit can infiltrate the powerplant via the tunnel without taking to much damage and then plant a beekon and defend it. It's very risky and it's better if some guys follows him and a tank keeps the tower busy.

I did that yester day without the beacon. I used the stealth suit and broke through the AGT to the power plant. I placed a timed C4 and blew have the health of then shot it with my laser rifle. I only needed two or three more shots and it would have blown, but some *er killed me. That was a great adrenaline rush.
