Like seriously, why the hell do I have TWO melon-ballers?! I've never even used one before. I've found a blender, a slightly more powerful blender, and a freaking Cuisinart. I've found some margarita-martini-cocktail mixing thinger, and yet I think cocktails are totally fagged out. Hell, in another box, I've found various hubcaps, and a George Foreman 'Lean Mean Fat-Reducing Grilling Machine' , plus some panini grill... and I don't even know what panini is. I've even found a slide projector that looks like it's from the Seventees, and the box it's in definitely smells like it's from the Seventees.

What am I going to do with all this crap!? FUCK.

Or send it to me! (provided you pay P&P) and I will discard it in ebay.com, AND as an extra bonus, keep all the money.

I wish that were the case, because then I'd have someone else to blame for it.

Most of this is my doing; I frequent yard sales, and buy stuff I don't need. The rest of the crap is either given to me by family or friends, all of whom must secretly hate my guts.

I'll either Craigslist the stuff, or dump it all in a public park or something and hope a kleptomaniacal dumpster diver finds it.

Hell, maybe I'll just rent a Bobcat for a day, and dig a big hole in my neighbors back yard, and dump the junk in there, and bury it. He's on vacation, and he's an asshole. Ironically, he holds garage sales often, many of which I frequent. It'd likely be cheaper than making multiple trips to the dump, gas prices and all.

Good News: I sold the George Foreman Lean Mean Fat Reducing Grilling Machine to some granola chick for ten bucks. I also found half a brick of bottle rockets that I stashed years ago!

Bad News: They were all duds.

If you haven't used any of that in the past 6 months or more, then trash it. Its just that easy.

That's what I have been doing. There's the other part of the garage that's looking much better. I just took a picture of the worst area for lols.

The motorcycle is actually slated to be restored by me; it's a mid 70's BMW, and it belongs to my Dad. He wants to ride again after all the years, and he's not getting any younger.

Don't throw away the usable stuff! I'm sure there's tons of people out there who would benefit from you donating your outdated machines and such.

EDIT: Of course, there's still a lot of junk and trash. How many years did it take to accumulate like that?
