Make a way that everyone (or atleast mods) could see what's in the players datafolder (files) and maybe open them (   ) it would be easyer to find cheaters. maybe a separate program

That wont be needed as all objects cheats are going to be blocked so even if they do have the cheats in there data folder they wont work.. Or atleast thats what ive been led to believe.

I don't think it's even legal for servers to be looking through their player's computers.

If there is somekind of terms and conditions link and clear warning that if a player continues to play on 'this' server, we (the server) is allowed to check your data folder.

Possibly even include a warning as such in a patch update -> (By getting this update, you hereby to allow the server you are connecting to search your Renegade Data folder for files.) .. something like that.

That would technically make it legal (unless I'm missing something...)

Negative. We don't want our computer's contents searched and I doubt you want it either.

Sorry, I doubt TT wants to be sued by multiple people across many nations.

There is already a FDS command (scripts 3.2+ i think it was) that allows files to be found remotely
 Just have to know the specific names.
