Asking for release dates only makes us spend more time at the forums reading these stupid posts and makes us have less time for actually coding TT. Answer is the same as always. Done when it's done, stop asking please.

Do you ever answer nicely? I've seen alot of your posts lately in this section and you seem to get an attitude with everyone.
For someone who is suppossedly representing the ren community,you're a real ass.

Stop asking. We don't know we are not psychics we can't forsee what will happen. Remember we are doing this in our free time, its not like its our full time job.

I would be getting pissed off about people asking for release dates too. It says explicitly in jonwil's post that TT does NOT know when Scripts 4.0 will be out, and to not ask.

It's not like the community is being very nice to the TT group, given that like Ghostshaw said, they are doing this in their free time. They're not getting paid, and they did us the courtesy of announcing that it would be done at all. They COULD have kept it a secret, but they didn't... and this is how we repay them? By asking when it will be released? Bitching about the fixes they're putting their effort into?

Like I said, I'd be getting pissed off too.

feeling insulted about asking for something as simple as a time table might go to show that it's going to be a long, long time before it will be done

I predict one year from now. Or else, I ban myself from the Command & Conquer universe.

I'm amazed that movies set release dates before they even start production. It's surprising how many times they actually get pushed back.

Would you rather have no release date set, or be disappointed when it's not ready at the date they announce?

For someone who is suppossedly representing the ren community,you're a real ass.There is a history to that post. Hitman asked at least once before and already got the answer that he shouldn't ask again, which is exactly what he did now. It clearly says so in the announcement post too, and I assume he has read that because otherwise, how would he know there is no release date in there? He knows he shouldn't ask and still does, well, to me that's less polite than my reply to him...

I don't see where I got the position of representing the Renegade community though. Also, I really don't know what's so bad about my posts. I think there are others in TT that are less friendly tbh. You're not identifying me by my avatar? Because most guys in TT use the same avatar, but they are not the same persons.

LOL, StealthEye and being an ass :+
I guess you call anyone that does not entirely agree with you an ass right?

Anyhow, with something likew this, where most work is done mby disassembling renegade, it is incredibly hard to project ANY timeframe. The fact that everyone is doing it in it's spare time makes it even harder.

Oh, and if you're (still) trying to identify who's an arse, then me AND you would be a good gamble to begin with.

Well, if you want a guess from me, who is not a TT member and has no idea where the coding is at at the moment, I'd say we shouldn't expect the beta before next year.

As said: I'm not informed at all, but it seems best to me to not put our hopes up for this year: there's only 4 months left after all and I know how much time coding takes.

However, I'm confident that we won't need to wait another year. I don't think they would have announced it if they knew it would take at another year or so.

just release the anti cheat by itself. like right now.

Subject: Re: soooooooooo

Don't say things you don't know anything about. We can not release only the anti cheat part, splitting the anti cheat part from the rest is probably just as much work as getting the rest released as well. And we can't release all of it currently either, because my guess is that you are not happy with a client that is bugged worse than the original renegade client and that crashes before you finished a single game. If I play Renegade now, I don't use the TT client. Why? Because I can't play properly with it at this stage of development.

No, I don't use any skins anymore and don't plan to.

I don't even know what was in the original archive...I updated the file on my webspace every few weeks and then other people like boomer put their own skinpacks together and called it pimpmyren as well. The only files in there that I created were the reticles, some rims and later on some ground textures, anyway...:/
