Why dont we discuss who we really are and what we really do outside these forums? Besides a few nerds who think there better then everyone else im sure theirs some decent people here.

For example

im tanner 16 years old soon to be 17 years old in December 20, born and raised in riverside California. As of right now just a normal student in my high school basic shit, homework school and visit my girlfriend (shes 18 and in collage ^^) and then do anything else with friends or family. Im not the smartest person in the world but then im not always on a pc but im trying ym best so i can go to a university to get a BA degree in computer science to specialize in programming...well im try, your turns,

Not going to tell any truth here apart from the fact that you shouldn't Capitalise Every First Letter Of Every Word In The Topic because I thought it was another retarded thread by thrash300000.

If you were capitalising it as a title it would read;

The Truth About the People Behind the Forums

Since you don't capitalize the word 'the' in titles, unless it is the first or last word in the title.

<http://www.grammarbook.com/punctuation/capital.asp> Always capitalize the first and last words of titles of publications regardless of their parts of speech. Capitalize other words within titles, including the short verb forms Is, Are, and Be.

Exception: Do not capitalize little words within titles such as a, an, the, but, as, if, and, or, nor, or prepositions, regardless of their length.

Examples: The Day of the Jackal
What Color Is Your Parachute?
A Tale of Two Cities

Daniel, 17, live in the UK.

I work in a hospital doing work on computer and paper.

I like to build anything "that does something" IE: my big collection of model aircraft and electronic projects. I also play the keyboard. This same applies to programming, I like to program something up, even if it's quite small, and get a nice satisfaction when it works.

You said 'everyone else', which by definition includes everyone, including myself. However, I have no intention of arguing the point further, as it serves no useful purpose.

Anyhow, in that event I shall retract my earlier statement, but perhaps more consideration in the wording of your posts in future might be advisable.

My name is Spencer, I'm 26 years old living in Welling, Kent. Which is only a couple of miles away from being London, so it's easier to just say I live in London for the sake on non-Uk'ers. I'm a print operator who's the substitute for the IT analyst when he is on leave. I've been succession planned for the role, and they did want to put a second analyst on the account. But due to the hard hitting credit crunch and financial climate (especially in copererate banks such as the one I work in) that isn't going to happen.

I earn pretty decent money, enough to pay for my three bedroomed house and a pretty expensive wedding a couple of months ago to my lovely wife.

I'm involved in several communities based around the w3d engine, and have always been keen on modding it.

I'm currently studying for qualification in programming. I will hopefully complete this in a couple of years, probably changing my career when and if that happens.

I plan on starting a family next year, there could be some complications as i've had an operation on one of my testicles and my wife has endometreosis. But fingers crossed it will be fine.

I did hope to emigrate when I could get out of my mortgage, I am not near negative equity like some of my friends, but if i'd of sold last year I would of had 90-100 thousand pounds sterling in the bank. I regret not doing it then, but with so much work on the house we wanted to stay a while. Plus my wife wanted the wedding in this country in a Church (not that I am Christian). That's probably my biggest regret in my life so far actually. If I was to sell now, I would have around 35-45 thousand pound sterling, probably less. The credit crunch doesn't look like its going away soon either, so I guess i'll be in England for a while to come yet.

I don't like to label my religious beliefs, but I guess I follow pretty much Spiritualism and Bhuddism, perhaps being influenced by Spiritualism more. Although they both over-lap allot anyway in terms of meditation.

I'm a calm person normally, quite a jel0s when in comes to my wife, but other then that i'm pretty cool normally. It takes allot to piss me off most of the time.

I'm at the stage of my life now where I prefer to have parties at a friends home, or my own. Going out always seems to cause trouble, which I am not interested in at all. I'm six feet six inches tall with sixe twelve shoes, and no light weight either weighing in at 18 stone. But that's deceptive, i'm not a violent person at all, I hate fights. Don't get me wrong though, i'm there for my friends in a club and the first to throw a punch in someones face if it needs to be done.

I enjoy playing computer games, online and offline. I also play poker quite regulary with some friends, i'm not that bad really.

Hope I didn't waffle on too much, but now you have a better in-sight into who I am.

Apart from party's and beer, I have a passion for building computers, even if I'm a total idiot when it comes to the hardware factor of it, Building stuff and making it work fascinates me and I want to learn more about Hardware, or engineering, electric circuits or anything.

as of now I'm looking for a job as a Kitchen porter, I'm 16 in three months so I get a National Insurance number soon so I'll be getting a slightly higher paying job working for my auntie's company in January while plummeting my way through collage.

I work at a hosting company called PCextreme B.V. who reached the 23 place of the sidn best seller of .nl domain names.
I deliver support on anything that has to do with websites, domain names registrations transfers. Enom this lcann that. I work there for 60 hours a week, that is 12 hours a day from monday till friday. I earn a very decent money.

Im still on school study IT mediaproductions, visualized stuff.
Its pretty much all bullshit because i like the technical background of everything.

Besides work right now, i also really love to hang out and going out.
Every friday and saturday im with my friends, i love to drink. and got a very passion for smoking. However people keep talking bullshit about smoking is bad, i still refuse to listen.

Interrested in having a conversation?
call our support desk 0900 9633 (dutch ppl only, request for jason).

Hi, my name is Ivan, I'm 19 years old from Sofia, Bulgaria.

I am a freshman at Sofia University in the field of Informatics, but i have been working as a salesman for the last two months; trying to save money for a drum set.

I have been in the C&C community for 8 years now. I have released a few mod tutorials, but i have never really finished a project of mine. Due to time-related issues, I am currently not available for modding.

My goals are to get a Bachelor Of Science degree in the fields of Informatics and Software Engineering, get a Master's degree in Japan and work as a programmer (preferably outside Bulgaria).

In terms of religion, I have been baptized, but I don't believe in God. I consider myself an atheist, but i don't fully deny His existence.

Won't go into to much detail.

M/17 in a month/US

I run cross country for my school with a personal best time (since 10/08) of 18:53 on the 3.1 mile (5K for you Euro types). I'm 6'3 and am the 4th or 5th tallest of all the juniors in my school. I like being tall as I can see over everyone.

I'm quiet and somewhat reserved. I don't have many friends, but the ones I do have I've known them since I moved to our house where we are now 5 miles away from the worst city in Wisconsin (murder/crimewise). It's very hard to get me angry, but you know it when I am, and God help you if you are the one I'm angry at. I'm a brownbelt in JKLee's Tae Kwon Do, but I haven't gone for about 4 or 5 months. So I've had a brown belt for almost a year. Another reason to fear me when I'm angry.

I just got my braces off today and my mouth feels very funny. I keep licking my teeth going "this feels weird, where are my braces?"

I'm very political savy imo and in College I plan to major in Engineering, and minor in Political Science, then become a Senator and help steer this country back to where it should be. ie: the passive giant that can kick almighty ass like in WW2, but be an aggressive player in the global market.

Okay, that was more than I thought I would type.

Last thing, I just got a job at PicknSave a couple weeks ago.

EDIT: changed PR, I also have hearing aids btw.

I'm Kirby Peawauket and I live in a Chicago Suburb right nearby Joliet in Illinois. At least for parts of the year I do. Currently I'm in college. I go to Bradley University in Peoria, IL and am a junior Electrical Engineering major. I'm also a moderator on the Renegade Forums.

What else... I like electronics, programming, play tons of Rockband on the Xbawkz 360... Hope to get a job working with embedded systems. Maybe with a defence contractor. That'd be pretty sweet... What else... I have a girlfriend, we've been going out for just over a year... Took her to a fancy yet slightly odd Italian steakhouse to celebrate. I didn't know the Italians were known for steak...

Yeah I can't think of anything else to add...

I forgot, I also play Guitar and build Guitar Effects pedals...

Well my name is Andrew ( go figure) and im currently 19, living in Ottawa Canada. I'm in my second year of University studying in a unique program called bachelor of information technology -> networking stream. Its a joint program between Carleton University and Algonquin college.. basically i do 60% University, and 40% college over 4 years-> 40 courses. However i also enrolled in Coop which means i go to work starting next year for one year, in the field, so its actually a 5 year program.

Basically whats awesome about the program is when i graduate i get a degree from carleton university in IT, a diploma from algonquin college in IT, and when i complete COOP that will also be added onto the degree, and ontop of it all i'll have the background in both CCNA and CCNP certification. Oh, and of course the subject covered falls mostly in networking, but we still do hardware and software ( ASM, c++, Java, php/html etc ). Definately liking school thats for sure.

So when im not busy with school i currently work @ a breakfast/lunch restaurant on weekends ( doors lock at 3pm meaning i have nights free .. ), and also work @ the university on wednesdays before a single class in the late afternoon. So when it doesnt deal with school or work, i spend my time with my amazing girlfriend of 9months. Oh, and i have my own car ... 2001 chrysler neon ftw

Started playing renegade a few years ago and quickly chose n00bstories as my home, and have been there ever since ...
You can get me on xbox live under the same name andr3w282

I'm Nikki, and I'm 21. My main job is managing apartment buildings. I've just gone back to school, doing classes in Business, and Political Science. My dream job is to go into journalism, and write about cars.

I love music, golf, and I also fence. Since I'm in Vancouver, I also do a bit of mountain biking, occasional sailing and I ski in the winter, although not as much as I'd like. Other interests vary from trading equities, to working on cars. My own vehicle is just a 1990 GMC Sierra, but I aim to get a 70's Corvette sometime soon.

My name is Daniel, I'm 22 as of this past August, and I live in New Jersey. Aside from gaming I enjoy going shooting, SCUBA diving, and building models. I am also currently working on a novel.

I tend to be the fly on the wall, preferring to hang back and observe rather than interact. I try to talk as little as possible, because I have a tendency to fumble over words while speaking. For the same reason, I try to avoid most people I don't know unless they're introduced by someone I know and trust. I do most of my socializing online because I find it easier and more comfortable to communicate anonymously (and with a keyboard, which lets me correct the mistakes I inevitably make before anyone can notice them), but I do have a small number of very loyal friends.

nikki6ixx wrote on Sun, 12 October 2008 19:55 I've been fencing since I was about 10, and was taught in the 'French Tradition; my coach was a real hardass, and I fell out with him. Now I just do it recreationally, and I've only stuck with foil, and epee.

Ah, I haven't been fencing for too long. Just done foil so far, and I want to pretty much master that before I move onto another weapon. Epee doesn't seem like my style, but I may try it. Eventually, I'd like to go for sabre.

I guess I sort of stopped fencing in the sense that I haven't been taught by a coach in around a year, but I'm hopefully going to go back into it this winter.

In the meantime, I've been trying to increase my point control and general accuracy by various means. Hitting a plaid pillow (The boxes make good targets, I suppose), stuff like that.

Recently found a little ball thing that's about the size of a golf ball. I've been hitting it around my carpet floor, trying to not hit the floor (I can tell due to the distinct brush sound, and you can usually just feel it), and also trying to hit the ball itself. Trying to see how fast I can get it to roll then immediately make it stop by simply putting the tip of my foil in the way.

I dunno, probably really weird, and I probably just suck at accuracy.

How exactly does it work "recreationally", by the way? Do you just kinda practice on your own, or do you just fence with a few other people for shits n giggles?

I'm Steven. In my spare time I deal with my college work, or volunteer at Raystede Centre for Animal Welfare. I'm 17, nearly 18 and I intend to go to Uni and become a Veterinary Surgeon (because animals are cool).

In case you hadn't already worked it out, I like animals, however, my family have an allergy to animal hair (I don't) and so I can only own small animals in the home. So I breed hamsters. As a result of this, I currently own 11! (It's odd for hamsters to have litters larger than 5, and this one is 9)

Oh well. Hamsters and drunk friends on MSN...
