That happened to me before. Just delete "Global Mix Cache" from the XCC mixer folder, and the program should work the next time you launch it.

Most recent version is 1.45, and it's included in the XCC Utilities pack that you can get at <http://xhp.xwis.net>

If you try installing that utilities pack and it gives you a missing dll error, PM me and I'll send you the dll pack.

Actually if you looked on that site the most recent version is 1.46

He said that on the website, but the version it says in the top left corner when you launch the mixer included in the XCC_Uutilities.exe is 1.45. If you'll notice, Olaf hasn't really paid attention to that page in recent years.

My XCC Mixer that I downloaded from that site and got out of XCC Utilities says different.

I just downloaded it again, extracted it and it is version 1.46.

Ah, seems that when I installed the version that jelly was hosting on their site to compare it to the one I had, it overwrote the shortcut in my start menu folder. Oops

Edit: My point about Olaf's neglect of the website still stands. Also, do all of the programs in that XCC Utilities work fine without the DLL pack?

Just tested each one I was able to run each one without the DLL pack, I agree with you saying he doesn't bother to update that site enough also.
