very nice job , add better water . Did you just hex edit it and add some bushes and stuff or did you import the map and retexture it.

if he remade the map its probably part of the map. if not he did it in level edit. A good way to add a whole bunch of bushes is to import the map. line out the bushes then export only the bushes and add it in level edit.

First of all, what the fuck is the point of making stuff just for yourself? Shouldn't your goal be to share it with other people?

Second thing is that this bears no resemblance to Crysis what so ever, why would you call it the Crysis project? All you did was swap textures and add some bushes.

funny, how the reactions go the this:

and this part:

This.

If you're going to post something, atleast have intention to release. Also, that seems to bare no resemblance to crysis. If the point of calling it "Crysis" was because of more graphical things, then name it something else. I might aswell make a mod about mutants taking over the world and call it "Renegade: Half Life" or something.

Also, bloom in general looks shitty. Why the hell does everyone think bloom=good graphics? It looks terrible.

I actually think the bloom liked nice in this one. Sorta added to the atmosphere of the environment.

As for the map, it's really nice bro. Doesn't really matter what he calls it. Idk why people made a big deal from that lol. If he thinks it bears at least some resemblance to Crysis then let him name it so. You really think he could have copied Crysis' graphics exactly on Renegade? -.-

Music on the video sucks.

The map doesn't appear to be changed all that much apart from the texture replacements, added trees and LE objects. This is nearly as bad as C&C Canyon Modified. Also, this bears no reference whatsoever to Crysis, unless you used textures from it.

Tbh you should of called it C&C_Islands_facelift or something.. The bushes are freashing as the textures are due to how long we have been playing the game..

But the bushes and trees just do not seem right, seeing how you have trees growin in the middle and they look more like bushes and the bushes on the walls are in one straight line, therefore not looking natural rather just merged with the map and dragged vertically there.

You guys are so obsessed with bloom and shiny things. Its doesnt even make the game look good. All it does is hide low quality visuals with something that doesnt even make sense. Essentially making the visuals look even worse.

Yes theres really going be a heavenly glow around everything right? And there is definatly going to be shiny and glowing things in a battlefield so that everyone can spot it from miles away. Infact lets make everything out of chrome, and attach spot lights to everything and make things even more shiny!

Seriously though, when your shadows are glowing, you know you've fucked up big time. Pardon my french by the way.

Back on topic. Your idea isnt bad, but the bloom just kills it. Also one thing to note is that this is an island that is close to the sea level. So naturally there will be a lot of sand, yet I see next to none. The foliage just doesnt add up. You cant have any trees, leaves or that kind of foliage growing out of rocks. You need soil for there to be foliage. Right now you have all sorts of foliage glued to giant bolders of rock. One more thing I could suggest is Fog. There is never a day on Earth when there is literally no fog at any location. Fog can really bring your world to life, but you have to be very careful and be very subtle about it. I'm not saying fog in the sense that you cant see anything infront of you, but rather I'm suggesting fog wheren distant objects begin to loose their details, and start to blend into the background. This can really help to bring scale into any map and is very cutial.

I think you are going a little overboard with the details here. It's a game so trees can grow wherever they want. If you are looking for realism, find a different game. However, I do agree that there could be that "fog" you speak of.

I support this in theroy, I'm a strong advocate of releasing material. However, I do tend to think that if people who do not release there mods did not post them here, then the idea would not be there for others to plagerise and geta release out anyway. Tricky one really...

yea, but in some cases it isn't to show their idea but to showoff on which flaming follows. Because of that, better to keep it out.

Well, there are certain people here who just make it for themselves and don't have any intention of releasing, but do showoff here.

If they werent allowed to showoff, then they would either not make it, or choose to release it (eventually).

Because topics like this are pretty hilarious, at least in cases where the original poster thinks he's totally totally awesome for making the mod, and believes he's hot shit because one or two people would suck his dick for it, while everyone else doesn't give a flying fuck.

To show off, get a website and refer people to it, if they wanna see it they can visit the website. its called a "portfolio"

Although madrackz does make some very good things (yep he does that sometimes when his ego is at sleep). But yeah i must agree with the previous posts. please dont become the guy that shows off and does it to improve his ego, it will backfire at you some day...
