I'm making this post to elaborate on something that seems to have caught up with me after 2 years. Yes, this happened 2 Years ago, and yet somehow has become popular again.

2 years ago I was a moderator at n00bstories and got ahold of a "hack" that let me talk as if I was someone else. I used this in n00bstories 1 time and played a joke on a fellow moderator (andrew282, which was a mod at that time). Because of this I was suspended from being a mod for 2 months, but was reinstated after that.

Things had changed in my life a few months later and I hadn't played renegade for a year. My extended absence was the actual reason why I lost my mod powers there. If anyone talks to crimson, feel free to ask her as I'm certain she would verify this, but for some reason rumor has spread differently.

Are you a friend of Sir Kane? AFAIK he's one of the few people smart enough to create these hacks and stupid enough to use them.

BIATCH blocks these kind of hacks nowadays, anyway. If you just used them to pull a joke on a friend, then how come this suddenly bites you in the ass?

As usual, Renegade drama is mostly provoked by your own actions.

It was a tool written by dead6re a couple years ago. And yeah luckily biatch completely put a stop to all of dead6re's shit

I'd actually say that's a legitimate concern, because moderators for a server should not have a history of hacking for the sole purpose of fucking with individuals.

Isn't there an FDS command than can do this or is that what you're talking about?

No, If Dead6re was involved, it will be more sophisitcated. Like Raven said, it'll be a netcode hack, that lets you play as A, but send messages as B, or C, or D, etc.
