Open fields, Medium tank, Lots of rocks and depressions, Light tank. Stealths are better in open ground warfare than Light tanks anyway.

"Stealths are better in open ground warfare than Light tanks anyway"Absolutely wrong, light tanks are cheaper yet have more lasting strength and not much less firepower, where as stealth would die, and even if you didn't and ran, would be no use because its easy enough to shoot where the stealth is going even when its cloaked and hit it in the current levels, now imagine in a big open feild.

Medium tank, unless I have enough money to buy like 4-5 mammoths, and then I buy them for the team and we go attack. I hate seiges, they are so boring.

The fact that they have 100/100 less hp is more than made up for by the ability to disappear if the going gets tough. Trying to find a ST that just disappeared with the explosions of your rounds in a open field is difficult if the ST knows anything about evasive manuevers Light tanks can be shot at from farther away and cannot take a Medium head on without a deathwish, but a ST could work its way behind a Med Tank, open up, turn and cloak, wait till you see thier backside again, open up... I love Stealth Tanks.[May 02, 2002: Message edited by: ZTankMuncha] for almost every situation I would choose the medium tank. There's only one map I'll choose the mammy, and the map is under. It's so fun to have 4-5 mammys and siege the nod base.

Medium Tank: It's slim and has a much better handling than ANY other tank (IMO).

For attacking, I chose the Medium tank. But for defending, I park a Mammoth next to a building's entrance, get two nOObs to constantly repair me while I bombard the entrance to our bases. I don't need to worry about a sneaky sniper shooting the nOObs, because the enormous body of the Mammoth tank will keep the entrance to the building covered. If an attacker gets past me, the nOObs can quickly get into my tank before they die.

Sure medium tank if you have to confront someone... But here's a thought, why don't get the MRLS and bombard the enemy base from some place you won't get busted from right away?

The fact that they will eventually get to you sitting in a lightly armored mrls is enough to not go out and use it by itself. It only works against people who know nothing about defense or want to defend. However, I will try to get people to use mrls' early on in mesa to destroy Nod's power plant. if this is taking place as a tank battle in a large open field...why don't we find out whats the best? someone start a server on WOL and play the map country medow(or however you spell it)that would be the best way to find out.it has some obstacles, cannon emplace ments rubble..i think it equals one big tank war! what do you think?

The mam is too boooooooring so slooooooow Yes I prefer the med tank. Useful for :- hit and run tactic- med tank rush (why people never use this ??! Whith hotwire inside this is just deadly)- defending via blocking/destroying incoming flame-tank/apc/buggy (especially efficient on under, field, wall).I use med also because the enemy get less points when he destroy your tank. I've seen so many games where GDI lose just because of large number of destroyed unsupported mam... Just attacking alone with a mam is so...

The MRLS is ok, but all you need to is bring a buggy really close to it, as start attacking it. Then you can crush the driver

The medium tank is almost always a better coice. Its almost half the price and its way faster. The mammoth cant dodge attacks it cant retreat if its gettin killed and everyone attacks it first.

I love Stealth Tanks.[May 02, 2002: Message edited by: ZTankMuncha]Light tanks can easily take on mediums if the driver is good. The light tank has faster turret rotation than medium tank in addition to the speed and general manueverability.As for stealths.. well. any good tank driver won't let a stealth get away even as it's cloaking. Just shoot at it and you'll continue to see it's shimmering blue outline. Plus, it's rare that I've ever alone in a tank.. most games have people all over the place all the time. Once that stealth decloaks to shoot me, it's likely that it's going to get hit by several people very quickly.I love mammoths when appropriate. I hate it when people simply dismiss them as an option claiming that they give the other team too many points. They do have their uses when used properly. On small maps they are great once you can afford them. They also have the missles which massacre infantry with ease compared to trying to kill a single soldier with a medium tank. They also self heal to 600 health.Of course mediums are my favorite, but there are times were mammoths work very well.

The med tank! (and with the rare mrls or mammoth backup its nearly unstoppable for a good 3 minutes...) And if I'm playing as Nod I'll use the light tank OR stealth tank if I'm on defense. On offense its the flame tank with arty backup of course.

Medium tank 90% of the time. It's a very good combination of speed, armor and firepower. Mammoth tank only for base defense or when I know that the area between my base and the enemy's is free of stealth units and other tank killers. With the mammoth, retreating usually isn't an option, you'll get ripped to pieces long before you're in safety.

I understand why everyone thinks Stealths are going to get killed right away, when I'm in a Med Tank and one passes me by, I almost always succeed in killing it. Is is cause the Stealth Tank sucks? No, it's cause you can't take on something with twice your hp head-on without a deathwish. I don't do that in a Stealth. I hide behind rocks while decloaking, wait till I start to fade out, let them see me fade out heading one way, and turn and go the opposite, then go back around some rocks, and basically 'Hide with Pride' Getting my shots in when you're not looking. I can keep Stealth tanks all game long most of the time, because they can run fast.I'm just telling ya how it is for me
