I mean, before they fixed the pathfinding, tons of people were hopping behind the wheel to help out the team. Sure, it can be a little boring, but it can also be loads of fun. Just cause the AI is back on track doesn't mean you can't still fulfill a good purpose by driving the thing once and a while. Just a thought.

It'd be interesting (and helpful) if you could buy extra harvestors (you still get the ai controled one) to get money more quickly.

You also said that chemtroopering the refinery gave you credits. And you said that in Under you could run through the big rock in the middle from some secret spot and end up directly inside the enemy pp. I remember. Oh yeah, and you also said that Hotwires secondary attack was a big mine that does more damage, yes that too. Did you also say that the basic infantry unit's secondary attack was the Volt Rifle?

Actually i think PN was the original harvy driver but then westwood took his keys away because he was high on the job or something.and they replaced him with someone who actually had a driverslicence.

OH, and it wasn't that Hotwire's secondary weapon was a bigger bomb...it was that she would throw her beret, which is actually, still, a pretty cool weapon. One shot, one kill.

i found out a really cool way to drive the harvy. but the problem is it uses alot of fuel, so bring an extra can. so, heres how you do it: first, take all the fuel, and pour it in that little slot on the front of your computer. then, you gotta start the sucker up, so turn on your computer. if it doesnt start, then "help it out" a little and toss a match in. wait a few minutes, and you ought to be ready to drive.

Driving the harvester hasn't been the same since the harvy drivers got together and formed a union.They go on strike in two days time to protest the low pay and working conditions (low shielding in the harvester against the tiberiem). The venue is being held outside the two main bases of GDI and the Brotherhood it starts at around 10.00am and will continue until our demands are met.Hope to see you there.POWER TO THE DRIVERS!!!!

They really should make Harv driveable. I remember back in original C&C that a Harv could plow through a bunch of maurading troops. With a good driver, the harv could serve as an emergency protector.Get this, true story-One time I was being attacked by an APC, I managed to blow it up but a bunch of Black Hands (or some other attack units) fell out and began to ran towards me, I was in BAD shape. Then, the harv suddenly showed up from behind them and ran them down! [June 12, 2002, 00:34: Message edited by: DFalcon999]

I was pulled over driving the harvy and lost my license... stupid "cant run over more than 10 enemy" laws.....good tactic is to set your beacon just as the harvy comes into the ref --- hard to disarm..

I havent driven the harvy sinds the new patch, a westwood official treatend to ban me if i drove the harvey against the Wal again . It was loads of fun though, driving around. I was always racing the other teams harvester, for the best spot on the tiberian field.
