Ok i was going through some old renegade news and i found a site that showed this.
<http://www.gamesdomain.com/gdreview/zones/previews/apr01/ren3.html> and I was sittin there tryin to figure out what it was. I thought gernade launcher but then whats up with the bullet holes and no explosion no smoke and is pointing down to far to hit the with a nade launcher.

Most people dont know that real grenade launchers arent like the ones in renegade they travel pretty far and they dont make an arch after a few feet IRL there like bullets with explosives in it. So maybe WW was making the grenade launcher realistic. Secound why do the models look diffrent? like on the WW screen shots the flamer has a flame tank on his back.. Wierd.. And on one of the Renegade trailers on gamespot there was an officer model that looked soooooooooooooo much better why did they remove the old models? or did they just make it like that to fool people into buying the game?

Its a muuuuuuuuuch older model. I'm thinking either Shot gun (must likely) or the auto rifle.

could be a Tiberium Gun. The pic on the second sight looks like the same weapon but you can see a toxic sign on it.

that's a silenced 9mm, m4 carbine with grenade launcher attachment, the chem gun, renegade sniper rifle, and an m16. I think the first pic is the assault rifle back in the day, Westwood was going to make it shoot grenades and be an auto rifle that's why it looks like a mix between the two {wish it was still like that}

It's an auto rifle, but with a round drum as a clip instead of the squarish shaped one.
