..flags aren't a symbol of culture or ethnicity... they are a symbol of the ideals the country stands for.

There is no such thing as an "American" ethnicity but that is not what an American flag stands for...

It's clear have no clue what you're talking about.

If I'm using your logic correctly, Mongolians should be allowed to do whatever they want to China.

China is made of many unique cultures. The difference is China has a history of assimilating groups; even now, the government is trying to squash ethnic and nationalistic diversity.

North America generally embraces that diversity. The best of all cultures are brought to North America. That gives the US, and Canada their own identities and cultures.

How about a little bit of reading. Maybe work on that English of yours.

I believe you're an incompetent, illiterate fool. You have no basis by which to attempt phrasing your "thoughts". They're so terribly written that it's difficult to understand exactly what you're saying.

Garble is a mystery: Is he a foreigner with only tenuous grasp of English? Is he on drugs? Does he suffer a serious mental debility? Is he typing wearing boxing gloves? Garble's rampant typos, malapropisms and execrable grammar can't be blamed solely on poor typing skills. Garble is all the more puzzling because if one manages to hack his way through the tangled muddle of his messages a discernable idea will often emerge. For example, in a forum discussion about a painting he might say, "Sorry the picchr the har is wrog. The culir. I liike the lips bot teh Paintng is sucs". When someone refers to his random capitalization Garble might say something like, "oPS i HITTED THE CAPDLOCK". Garble drives Grammarian and Nitpick absolutely nuts, but he disdains all efforts at correction, and if complaints persist he will indignantly sign exit saying, "yuor forum si stupef. bYE!" HINT: Garble may be Net Rat.

You, sir, are an ignorant, miseducated hypocrite. Not only do you fail to grasp the concept of 'culture' but you also neglect to take responsibility for the life you live.

You shun the limitations of society such as country's boarders but at the same time reap the benefits of such a society (you're obviously using a computer and the internet to type these messages). Unfortunately, life doesn't work that way. You can't just take all the good and disregard the bad that comes with it.

If you're going to live in modern human society and service yourself with the luxuries of today's living, then you have no right to complain about the drawbacks that such a society also has.

A country exists no matter who is in it.

An Englishman exists no matter what country he is in. (Same rule applies with all nationalities)

If you are born in a country, that is your nationality, not your heritage.

Deal with it.

It is not to hard to agree that america does not exist.
Their politics failed to keep america financially healthy.
This has nothing to do with the multicultural aspect though.

What do you mean it is not hard to agree? It's downright impossible because he is speaking nonsense... hence all the trollface in this thread.

Does anyone in this thread understand the definition of the word "exist?"

Something or the absence of that something is proof in and of itself that that something exists. A country exists because people recognize and respect its right to existence.

You can't say something doesn't exist because you don't like it. That's just random nonsensical gibberish.

Like what was said a few posts ago, there is a difference between heritage and nationality. You're heritage has absolutely nothing to do with your nationality. Meaning you can be Chinese, Spanish, English, Indian, African, Japanese, Italian, German or whatever without it making any difference to which the country in which you live

A Chinese man living in America is a Chinese American and that is different from a Chinese man living in China who is a Chinese Chinaman. The difference being that the nationality of that person is different in that they live in different countries... and that is all there is to it. Their race and heritage have absolutely no influence on their nationality.

Clearly it exists or else you wouldn't be talking about it.

Jeez, so many people have issues with the United States of America; maybe you should get off your lazy asses and do something about it if it really bothers you all that much. Either that or shut the fuck up, because being a bunch of whiny little bitches does not solve anything; and concentrating on the United States of America's flaws is definitely not going to help its standing in your eyes.

Although... if it didn't exist then you couldn't bitch about it, then maybe you could allocate your time more productively... or you would just bitch about something else; hard to say, we do exist so no reason to explore that further.
