Im looking for a company that hosts dedi servers but im unsure who has the best prices/specs.

Does anyone have any recommendations?

It can be EU or USA - Doesn't really matter.

I can recommend Leaseweb. Proper support, nice DC's and even pretty friendly for the environment all at a decent price

If you're looking to host a renegade server, then ask around here. It's likely that other server owners have boxes doing hardly anything but hosting their own Renegade server. You might be able to share with them or work out a deal.

Well ideally i'd like my own box so I can host whatever it is I need to..I need to host more then just a single ren server.

If push comes to shove and a box is just too expensive then I guess ill have to do that.

Until then can you recommend a company, Reborn?

Server4You, we (SilverBullet Servers) have had the EcoServer LARGE server for a few months and it's been great, it's cheap and you get a LOT.

Oh and ours is located in the EU (Germany to be exact).

I dislike 200+ ping. Though, whenever it's not on shitty hosts, it's not all that bad. (Looks @ TmX)

If you're in it for the longhaul Caveman, buy a server and use colocation. RedStation in the UK will sort you out a 1u rackspace for £45 a month (they currently have a deal for 3 months free).

get a vps server.

www.pcextreme.nl

or a colocation, that is much cheaper.

If you're looking at top notch quality: http://softlayer.com - They are expensive, but well worth the price. I can also recommend Limestone Networks (http://limestonenetworks.com) - Their service is great and so are their servers - but their control panel is nothing compared to SL's one. If I had to choose a host, I'd go with LSN, price/quality is great. SL is just a bit expensive.

if you're going for Softlayer prepare for European players randomly getting lag issues and lots of warping. You'll also be paying a lot more than you should be paying. Go for an European host like Leaseweb instead.

Leaseweb offers US based as well, if you want. But either way, I can really recommend www.leaseweb.com. Afaik it's becoming one of the larger players in the EU, and perhaps outside it as well.

I strongly echo the suggestion for both of these providers. I've worked with both of them running Renegade servers and running a GSP. They both run a great shop and they have a similiar take on business, even though one is 1000x times bigger.

Also SoftLayer will be launching their Amsterdam DC very shortly so watch out for even better competition in the EU market. SL has also had a POP in Amsterdam for quite some time which would improve ping times to their NA servers from EU gamers.

Lone;

I assume you're using Win 2k8 64bit. How does the FDS cope with that? A few people have told me it doesn't like 64bit OS's.

Yeah, we're using Win 2K8 64bit Web Edition.

The Renegade FDS works just fine on it, haven't noticed any problems.

Other servers that we have running are: 4 Killing Floor servers, 2 TF2 servers, a Minecraft server; no issues at all and still plenty of resources left.

We've been running it on Windows XP 64bit ever since we have our own box, which is April 2007 I think.
