It's so frustrating to have players not let you know what they are doing or where they are at. I'm all for people doing recon and attacking by themselves, but they should at least let their team know. Last night I was in a 4v4 server. 2 of my teammates seemed content to only fly around in Apaches and never help out back at base. I had STs and FTs stolen a couple times because I had to get out to repair or defend a building. Then those vehicles were of course used against us. I and another teammate kept calling the others back to base but they never responded. I also kept asking for coordinated attacks but they would just fly off. People still do not realize that it takes TEAMWORK to do well during a game.

haha. if you want good teamplay you have to join a clan or you have to be very lucky that you have many players that are like you. i use very much communication too but i have often the idea that nobody is listening. i think that if there was only a teamscore and not a personnel score there will be much more teamplay because you can not get a personnel victory like:player1 4389player2 1987player3 1134player4 869many players are doing everything on their own and refuse to go defense because they will then never become player one

I've joined three different clans in the past few months, but they NEVER play. I wish I could find one that played at least 4 or 5 times a week. Does anyone know of any that are taking new members?

You will have to start your own I think. Most people are back in school, or have families and can't dedicate the time to organize. And even if you do start your own, you need someone to play against. Some clans have to resort to playing each other in order to guarantee a game.

You might want to try and play on non ladderred games. Usually on ladderred servers there's hardly any teamploy. I only play on those servers when one or more buddies are online..
