As soon as they buy a character they run out of a building just shooting wildly. WTF? I guess they figure they won't need those wasted bullets in a firefight. Why waste your ammo on the way to the enemy base? Especially if you haven't even left yours yet? Now I can understand if you're GDI and you're shooting to mark a Stealth, but other than that there is no reason to go shooting off your gun inside your own base. This is especially annoying when you just exit a building and a teammate is shooting at something and you think that they are shooting at an enemy. Nope, just an idiot trigger happy n00b! Don't shoot unless you mean it!

Same here. Then I realized how each gun works and aims good and how far....now I have stopped unless I feel the fear of finding a stealth or to make sure a section is clear before I enter.....if more people used theclear before enter it would get them a lot more kills....just think Army/Swat when u you do

I will only do this to shoot out the windows in the HON, as they obstruct your view when trying to zoom in with the sniper rifle. Then I hit the pt and reload.

I flip out and load the pistol and I may fire it because it has unlimited ammo but I avoid using primary ammo like that.

I do it more with GDI then Nod and as character i use the pistol so no waste off ammo. Tanks got unlimited so can stay shooting for stealth.

Ever heard of refill?No, it does matter because if someone is shooting their gun inside our base I think they are shooting at an enemy who has gotten in. It's very annoying to go running in the direction that they are firing only to find no enemy there. I just think it's stupid to blast away at nothing for no reason.

It's dumb to fire randomly unless you are looking for stealths like Demo stated.

Not only is it annoying to just shoot randomly (unless of course you're searching for stealths), but it also takes precious bandwidth away! Every bullet has to be tracked until it hits something or explodes. . . you'll just slow down the game

Trigger bug??? Don't believe so. I think it's just when the game uses too much memory while you are firing, hence, when it goes back to normal, it thinks you are still firing. One easy way to fix this... Click

A couple very good explanations come to mind in finding the reason most people do this, one they are new to the whole idea of online gaming and figure it's better to get an early hit than decimated later, that or they are running on dial-up and are frustrated that they are not seeing the results of their frantic button pushing but you are, and finally the ultimate theory these people suffer from premature ejaculations and it shows thru their shooting (no insult to those who use to do this only to those who still do lol) , my personal tactic is only effective in night maps in other games in which I sneak my way towards the enemy base without a peep from my gun and the first head I see I move I take out, so if you follow me in a game with a night map just keep in mind don't fire your gun off unless it's silenced or I've fired mine!!!
