it's the American way we have a day every year called Columbus day, a day to celebrate the guy from Europe that discovered North America except he didn't actually discover North America, because vikings did hundreds of years before he even got there he killed millions of natives with his weapons and through disease the world population at that time was far lower than it is now, and proportionately he killed far more people than Hitler and all the Nazis combined he gets his own holiday

At this point, that's quite true.

No one credible would care, anyways.
