aol users sometimes get that message, because several people go through the same proxy/IP.

Yeah as Blazer said it mainly affects AOL users but also if you have a proxy server installed then it's likely this could be the reason. If your trying to post form your workplace or college then you're likely to be going through a proxy server which may effect it. If your Administrator lets you then you can ask them to bypass the proxy server for this site, which will allow you to post. Normally it's just the case of adding a hostname or IP address to the proxy server. If you use a proxy server yourself then you can go into Internet Explorer settings and bypass it for this site. Other things such as popup blockers and webfilters installed locally as software may also be acting as a proxy server so check that out if you have that type of software installed. Hope this will help some of you out.
