Alright im sure most of us here use AIM. I was just wondering if there is anyway to make the away message box not go down into the toolbar.....or if so have it passworded or something. Its so annoying when you have your away message on for like 5 minutes to go take a pooper cuz ur in a good convo you come back downstairs and your friends or family are talking to your friends.....argh so annoyin.....if you know how inform me plase Thanks!

If you are running windows XP, and assuming you have a password set for it, you can click Start, Logoff. Your programs including AIM will remain running in the background. When you come back you can log back in and resume where you left off. If someone else needs to use the computer, they can login with their own login, and your stuff will still stay running in the background.

Just a quick Note in WinXP. You can Hit your Windows Key and L and it will lock your desktop(Only when a password is assigned)
