CRIMSON'S NOTE: This post is WRONG. I made changes to the Image Gallery and I can't seem to get the old method to work. Visit your Image Gallery, right-click the image, and select "Properties" and use THAT url for your image. I will have the Image Galleries back at 100% very soon. Sorry for the inconvenience, and sorry to General_Havoc for editing your post.

Although the images in the signature are a good idea would people try not have dead images in their signatures. A few people are hosting their images on n00bstories image uploader then putting something like this as an url for the image
"http://www.n00bstories.com/image.fetch.php?id=1791216454". It isn't going to work as you are linking to a PHP database lookup and not an image file, bear that in mind when doing so. You will have to find a host for the image as you won't be able to use the image uploader to display external images.

I'll use mywebpage.netscape.com for only image uploading. That's what I'm using for my sig.

You can use images from your n00bstories image gallery...if you go to the "raw" image url, and then right click the image and select properties, it will show you the direct link to the .jpg file which you can use.

The Image Gallery is your BEST option for images in your signatures. Please disregard the post above as I've noted. The method you guys are using DOES work pasted as a direct link, but not as an embedded image like it used to. I'm trying to find a workaround for this while still delivering the speed you deserve.

If you have trouble with it, PM me on these forums and I'll help you out.
