Do you think that when Rickey Henderson broke Lou Brock's single season record, his coach ever yelled "Return to Base!"

OK, it's a bit specific, but it's still funny.

People with family members who are retarded may not find it so funny. It becomes acceptable because not enough % of people 'have it' in order to make it 'unacceptable'. Like doing HIV jokes in Africa.

Ok then. We should do a poll. How many people are retarded OR have retarded relatives that is on this forum? NONE! Ok. Case closed.

Naw but serouisly it is funny to me. But I can understand that it wouldn't be funny to people that is retarded or has retarded relatives.

I know it may be serious to the family members that why I said kinda you gotta read both sides of the coin but anyway drop it there before this topic becomes flamed out...

I do respect that kind of thing but I dis-respect flammers ...

Rickey Henderson I dislike you

Honestly, I have a half-sister that was mentaly handicaped. She recently passed away at the age of 40. I was offended at the pics, but was going to refrain from comment until now. I personally would like to see the pics leave. But I won't force the issue. I am relying on those with the pics to show some maturity and remove them please. Don't turn this in to a flame.

I have two nieces who are mentally retarded to various degrees, and have worked with Down's syndrome kids for many years. I find the picture amusing due to the wording, not the subject matter. It's also very relevant. Nothing to do with maturity or lack of it. People can take offense at anything and everything under the sun, so you can't please all the people, all the time.

I don't intend to remove it from the sig, but out of respect for K9 won't use it for this post.

Thank you.

Thoughts and memories are still very fresh in my mind. I didn't realize how much so until this post. Like I said, "I won't force the issue". It is something that I need to come to terms with yet.

Again,

Thanks.
