Looks like you some how attached a shortcut to the site to the Level edit icon. lol try reinstalling the tools2 program, but first un-install it.

What type of video card do you have? I'd recommend upgrading to DX9 if you haven't already. Is this a new error that has just popped up recently?

That's the mostly likely reason--try upgrading to directx9 at the Microsoft website.

Level Edit is very picky about which video cards it will run on. Try launching W3D Viewer and see what happens.

I have an HP with an intel card. It can run Battle Feild but just barely. Then, it just stopped working for it one day, and since EA has such great support, I never got it working again. These babies come with 64MB of internal memory, or, something like that. All I know is it's intergrated with the little motherboard thing, so it's a pain in the ass to get out.

Hmmm I would say disable the old one and buy a better one
