AprimeWelcome to the age of terror. :dontgetit:

Well,

Now that you've made that statement, and realize the threat is real, perhaps you could back off on your Anti-U.S. stance for our reaction to this threat.

The difference between America and Europe (Excluding Britain)?

America will NEVER accept terrorism as a way of life.

Sorry mate, but America has supported terrorism in the past. That's where the Taliban got all it's weapons. Define terrorism anyway. I believe it is something like radical measures taken to change something politically or symbolically. Terrorists usually don't hit the places where they'd get the most casualties, they attack the symbolic targets. I'm surprised that Al-Queda(sorry can spell it right now) didn't bomb the Statue of Liberty.

America can and will support terrorism if it helps them, not hurts them.
But that might be hard as practically everyone hates them.

The taliban is afghanistans government. And when we helped Afghanistan Al-Queda and the taliban were a thought in someones head. So pelase stop taking wrong things out of your ass.

And no they use unconventional attacks to scare people into doing things. aka nlowing themselves up in populated areas. there goal is to kill and mame as amny as possibl. Not to attack symbols.

LOL... :rolleyes:

Terrorism is simply this:

n.
The unlawful use or threatened use of force or violence by a person or an organized group against people or property with the intention of intimidating or coercing societies or governments, often for ideological or political reasons.

If you were to make a threat that you were going to blow up or to attack, for example, a US hospital, or embassy or some other government building, and you could possibly follow through with your threat, you are by definition a terrorist.

I'm sorry but the organization that you helped against the Soviets was the Taliban. And no country is above some form of terrorism.

In my opinion, attacking Iraq was little more than an act of terrorism. I say this because by attacking Iraq, we were hoping to scare other countries into submission. While that may not necessarily be a bad thing, it is also terrorism.

Incorrect again.

We helped the Mujahedeen, the Taliban came later as the strongest clan took control of the disorganized vacuum left when the Soviets pulled out.

The Taliban was a government based on extreme muslim ideas. It was not the people's revolution against the Soviets.

As you can see, the Taliban didn't come into existence until 1994.

You can also see the origins of the AlQuaeda network here.

It looks like Osama bin Laden's CIA training is surely helping him now.

Yea, because Saddam gasing the Kurds wasn't just genocide. But apparently people must think genocide is an OK thing if they think was an OK guy and didn't deserve to be invaded.
