I was playing the single player missions this morning, and was on the final level, "Stomping on Holy ground".

I entered a room where Kane starts talking about "How do you like my trophy? This is what happens to those who usurp my authority"

I didn't think much of it, as all I saw was a green, slender cylinder. Then I moved around the side, and you can clearly see a person inside the cylinder.

I personally think he looks like Seth, Kane's right hand man from Tiberian Dawn (C&C 95).

Any ideas?

I really miss Westwood's attention to detail in it's games. It's what has made this genre so appealing to millions around the globe.

Yes, it is Seth. When you walk up to the cylinder, Kane says something. I don't remember what it was though. I think it was something like "This is what happens when you don't obey me." It was something similar to that.

And for those who haven't played C&C 95, Seth was the right hand man who grew jelous of the player for doing so well, and drawing KANE'S praise. He keeps trying to send you on his personal missions to benefit himself, and Kane shoots him in the head for it. I just found it neat, considering how minor a charachter he was in the overall scheme of the rise of Nod.

I thought it was for trying to attack the pentagon

It was. He was trying for a power gambit. If he could defeat the U.S. the resulting power from that confusion would allow him to challenge Kane for leadership of Nod.

I assumed he sent the player to attack the pentagon because he was certain you would fail and would die. When he gave the mission orders he sounded frustrated with you not like he was trying to use you more like he was trying to get rid of you.

I also took a closer look in the sp mission. Yeah it is him

Seth is in the tank, he is being used to run nods ai

the web runner cars from nods ending in TD are on the top floor of temple at the far end behind a broken screen.

the large lump of rock seen being lifted out of the ground in both endings is inside a glass case half way through the level.

The texture for his face is in the M11.mix file, and if you look at it, it's really obvious that it's him (perhaps because the filename is l11_sethhed.dds).

Damn you all, now I want to make a skin

Edit: Just so everyone knows, I'm making one now

I had to extract the mesh from the level though, and therefore retexture it...But it shouldn't take too long, it's pretty simple UVW Unwrapping.

hence the blood on the side of his head.....

I always thought they were going to make hima playable character, bit I guess they left that out. Or mayebt hey modeled him for the nod campaign before it got canceled.

True, but one thing makes me wonder. I'm for 90% sure that the wound is on the wrong place.
In the movie, if I'm correct, you see Kane coming from the right, and shooting him, for the viewers right, in the left sight of the head. So way is the wound now on the right side of his head - for the viewers left.

Don't hold me on it, but this is the way I remember the movie piece.

Isn't the exit wound more violent then the entrance wound though? If so, the that skin would be correct.

True, but I don't see anything at the other side of his head. But it is hard to see anything trough the green tube, so I might have simpley missed it.

Trivia:

Seth was played by Eric Gooch, a superb artist responsible for a lot of the cutscenes in Westwood games.

very interesting, why the hell would he have someone he killed locked up in a green tank, supposedly to control nod computers, I wouldnt put something big on the shoulders of someone I betrayed.

[A-INastyDead]why the hell would he have someone he killed locked up in a green tank

He did it to show what would happen if anyone opposed him. It's a non-verbal threat to those who work under his authority not to undermine him, or this will happen to you. Hense the words in game: "How do you like my trophy? This is what happens to those who usurp my authority...".

Eric Gooch's real face could not be used for this model so it was painted to look like him thus avoiding any legal issues... a photo likeness of Joe Kugan could not be used due to some legal issues as well. It is absolutely Seth in the tube. I put him there. LOL.

hey, a few Ex-WW staff! w00t...

oh and yeah, Bump!

the thing is, in ren, inside the temple, you see the green room, where that reporter worked for kane, and they showed GDI killing the town, but that did not happen, anyway, you see that room, that was filmed in the old temple but, there was only one temple, so it must of been in the old one, yet, its back there in the new temple... weird. tho, i guess they might of made more fake movies to crush GDI's reputation.
 but yeah, i saw seth, saw the head stone form the old temple in that glass case, yet to see the webrunners, i remember them form C&C, just need to find them in ren.
