look at this:

i lend my freind my RA2 Sovite disk for a week and look at what he sends back to me in AIM when i ask for it!!!

i say: YOU BROCK MY FUCKING DISK

jigg says: i took it out and it was in peices

i say; YOUR COMP KILLED IT!!!

jigg says: usealy thay come out in a million peices

i say: THERE NOT SUPPOS TO COME OUT BROCKEN AT ALL!!!

well thats about it cuz i marched over the his house to kill him.....

how is that suppos to happen??!! he seid he looked it up online and he seid 48 speed drives will back disks if thay have the slitest defection.... WHY DO YOU HAVE TO GO SO FAST!

oh well, bound to happen sooner or later

Unless you opened up the CD-ROM case and stuck a screw driver or something like that straight through the CD, the CD-ROM will in no way break a disk, no matter the speed. I have a 52x CD-ROM, and a couple disks that are scratched too fucking badly to read from, and it doesn't damage the CDs at all. Also, the listed speed of the CD-ROM is not what it runs at all the time, and is only the maximum.

I LIKE IT!

it wasent me who killed it it was my freind so i have no fucking clue how he managed to kill it, he acted like it was normel, which is one reson i went to hims house and tried to kill him.....

now te question remains, how did the CD braek!

i think he treid to use it as a mirror and shattered it that way but thats just me.....

Ok. I have stepped on a cd before and it didnt do that. I have stepped on several cd's before and it didnt do that.

The only time I have EVER seen a cd broken into that many pieces that badly is when I purposefully broke it into pieces.

they found that most discs shatter at around 72-76x. some older ones could do so around 50x i guess. a quick google search can find lots of interesting pages and videos

I've had a few CD's break in a drive before, but only with a deep deep scratch...

Never into a kajillion pieces.

I for one can tell you that chewing on a cd does not do that,
I know this from experience, I only have one thing to say.
"Chewing on CD's is a bad idea! It hurts!"

I will set that remark aside because I see your sig says fuck everything.

I'm talking to my friend and he says the disk exploded because the disk drive was too good for this disk.... WTF!!! That little turd is always trying to make me feel inferior with his better stuff when

EA is slacking off like most other huge companies, like all small biasness they have to make better products than the others to get big, once they're big they start slacking off cuz every one trusts their products. Thus a shitty CD from a shitty company.

Where did you get that disk. Mine doesn't look like that mine's green and orange and has havoc on the front of them????

The difference between his disc and yours is his disc is a Red Alert 2 disc, as stated in his post as well, and yours are Renegade. That's why they are different.

These are the CD's from Walrus I think since he posted the pic not Infinint. And my Renegade CD's also look like this, only without being into millions of pieces.

The green is the install disc and the red the play disc.

Belive it or not it was a bad CDRW i had just picked up that day. It cracked the green disk and it exploded the red disk. Lucky for me I was able to get me a new one, the guy behind the desk though wouldnt pay up for the copy of ren that was killed. I had to buy me a new set. Not that I minded, I love this game.

I agree with you cause its true.

Your disk could of cracked in 1 of 2 ways. I would explain on how it happen (cause I experienced it many times at work) but do not have enough time. So I'll just post some links and let you read on how CD shattered in CD-Rom Drives.

1. It could be your friends CD-Rom Drive. It might be Defective. You said that he said that ever CD he puts in his drive comes out that way. Well this could be why:

<http://www.pcworld.com/news/article/0,aid,105458,00.asp>

2. It could be your Red Alert CD. You sure your CD was not Cracked in the middle when you gave it to him. Read up on this:

<http://www.fujitsu-siemens.co.uk/rl/servicesupport/techsupport/consumer/top10/cdcrack/cd1.htm>
