Well, first the tank is an "Abrams", there is no "h" in the name.

The model is below average at best, it has very little detail, the skin kind of makes up for the model, but not by much.

The thing could use alot more detail, especially around the tracks, the gears are too thick, and look more like tires.

Yes, the medium tank is an Abrams, or is made after the Abrams.

The Renegade medium tank looks even less like an abrams than this model, but this model is horribly lacking in quality

It is easily workable, what it needs is a more green tint to it, the detail is fine, also it might be an idea giving the skin a higher rez, it is kinda pixalized and that is what the renegade models lack, make it like higher rez and like a sick green color, the model is o-k i guess..

It isnt as bad as everyone says - the skin just looks too different to be an abrams.

Exactly... You don't even care that your model looks like crap, you don't even care enough to make it look any more than a half-assed low quality model. Why the fuck did you make it than? Why make something if you don't even care enough about it to make it right?

Laeubi, why is this kid on your mod team at all in the first place? You're just that desperate aren't you?

umm sorry to say this but that thing doesnt look anything like a M1 Abram tank.

first of all... scrap the whole thing

Make a new model, start by the chassis. than go make the treads than make turret... and finally add detail.

than get a good skinner to skin it.

looks at some good pictures of the tank.

that thing doesnt look anything like it.

I call him Loobie because that's what the RenAlert team calls him.

Agent Gibson came up with the remark and we've all been using it, ever since.
