Damn Sun servers. We have a Sun Enterprise-4000 at work that has 8 250Mhz CPUS in it. I looked into upgrading it and to upgrade it to 400Mhz processors costs like $1350.00 per processor...OUCH.

Expensive... but reliable as all hell too... the company that my father works at has a Sun server that pretty much runs everything. They once had it up and running and didn't require a reboot for 370+ days and the only reason they had to reboot it was because they were upgrading it. I wish my W2k machine would do that!

He he...My dad works for Sun. He gets to go repair/upgrade all these servers and such when they break or need an update. I have seen just about every part in them too...when you open the doors on that Sunfire 15K, it feels like a huricade hit you in the face. (It has like 15-20 250mm fans in it).

rm5248 get a cheaper dell server. they cost about as much or the same as a desktop. and they arent that crappy

2 Notes, First, Sun almost never sells for the list price, it's usually below what list price is. the only time that you would have to pay full price was if you are an impatient person and have to have it NOW, then they would charge you extra for being a pain.

As for the Dell server:

1. It's Windows...great for desktops, shit for servers.
2. Dell servers have a max of 4 processors each. That server I linked to had a max of 106...
3. Sun installation is included. Dell, you have to pay for it. That bumps the price up to being about equal.
4. Dell maintenece is spotty at best, If you get a Sun support contract (like a warrenty), they will be there or the person who covers your system will have punishments (Fines, firing, looked down on) for not showing up (barring extreme cases: Act of God, part man doesn't deliver parts on time, etc).
5. Sun is 64-bits processed per clock cycle. Dell is 32.

Peace out,

you can have up to 8 hard drives. also, 2 intel xeon processers. up to 4 media bay hard drives. also available with a battery backup. and thats for the most expensive one. the cheaper ones are probably also fairly good, i think BTW you can also install your own operating system on it. they can install it with linux or windows.

Up to 8 hard drives?!?!?! So? This sun server supports the Netra S1 Thin Storage (Boot Device); 250+ terabytes direct connect storage available; Fibre Channel, Low Voltage Differential and Differential SCSI supported; Sun StorEdge A5200; Sun StorEdge array products supported, Sun StorEdge 9900 products will be supported. I highly doubt that this would match any of the numbers of the Sun server listed above. 2 Intel xeon processors? Wow... I still can't bring myself to being impressed, especially after seeing that the server shown here is capable of holding up to 106 UltraSPARC III Cu 1.2-GHz processors and more than 1/2 TB Memory in a single domain... now this is impressive.

When you think about who this meant to be sold to, $138,500.00 is only pocket money.
