I have a 2000 Nssan Altima SE with an automatic 2.4L V4.
A certain other person has a 2003 Honda Civic EX with an automatic 1.8L V4.
Of the two of us I'm definately the better driver, not that it matters too much with two automatics.

Who do you think would win if we were to race? (be honest)

Just because it's a V4 doesn't mean it's slow... It all depends on how it's set up...

True a properly setup Honda Civic Type R will give a Dodge viper a run for its money on a straight and will slay the Viper on a track

The winner would be whoever has the better performance due to set up.

I really can't say too much because my knowlege is limited to domestics.

A Civic R type would give a Viper a run for its money but a 70 Charger Datona would blow'em both away on the track.

lol true, the charger would own them all. But i would have to buy my own oil well and refinery to keep the ba$tard petrol tank full. Especially over here in the UK, A gallon of petrol over here is about $6.50-7.50 (estimated)

Um, neither of the cars have had anything done to them. They just like they came from the factory. And btw the driver of the Civic is a girl.

Thanx for the input.

Well if the driver of the other car is a girl, you don't stand a chance no matter if your car is faster... Girl drivers speed like the police are chasing them any time they're behind the wheel.

i agree, if the othre driver is a women, you wont even get close, women drive like maniacs (not in an entirely bad way tho) man $50 says she runs you off the road if you take the lead maybe you could play it a little under handed tell her that her eyeshadow is running or sommin, maybe she will redo it while driving, either way your in for a battle
