The frame is wood, the scorpion tail is wood, and the background is hardboard. All by hand.

Wow! I'd pay like 30$ the set of both. Looking to go into the buissness? I would love to have those signs around my house. Even though those other people who live here probably wouldn't...

LOL...it's probably more than $30 worth of wood. Add to that the time to carefully cut it out, HOURS of sanding (who knows how many blisters he got), and professional painting. I would say these babies are worth a few hundred bucks each.

Surprised? Don't be.

- 1) Cannot be bought or found anywhere
  - 2) Skillfully crafted
  - 3) MANY hours of labor in creation
  - 4) Flawless end result and finish
= valuable

Thanks Blazer.

Yes, you are correct the materials alone definitely cost more than $30. And as much time and effort as I put into these logos make them very valuable to me. I don't think I could ever part with them, they just look too cool hanging on my wall.

Thanks again to all.

Any chance you will make a mold so you can easily duplicate some plastic or fiberglass replicas? They won't be as cool as the wooden ones, but will be far cheaper and easier for you to reproduce.

If I did choose to do so Blazer, who do I need to contact at EA for copyright/royalties? I'm guessing that I would need to send a finished product to them for approval and to set the royalty percentage. I may just do that, if it's not too much red tape.
