This is too funny. There is this page soliciting their program. It's using simple scripts to perform a "Security Test" on your computer. It tries to make you think that you are at risk...it's stupid little scripts that any beginning web designer can put on their sites. It even has your IP and OS and Location on there. Funny thing is, it only got my OS right. Where is Laguna Niguel, United States?

Wanna see for yourself? Here's the link: <http://www.syspage.com/ads/homepagesai.php?id=start1> hmmm Fairfax, off by only 50 or so miles! I'm guessing the "location" is of your ISP.

This is the best of them all:

Quote: * If a file from YOUR OWN computer can BE OPENED when you click HERE! (It should open c:\windows\win.ini as an example)

The url for the link is: view-source:file:///c:\windows\win.ini

I must be safe, it didn't open in Mozilla.

well...i guess it is to show that you are somewhat at risk if simple scripts can do that to you...but usually those are harmless scripts. But what really gets me is the location. How can you be so far off? That cd drive script is really annoying. It pops out my cd-rom drive. Doesn't seem like it would be a problem except for the fact that my tower has a door on it covering the power buttons and my drives.

No, its not a security leak. Its just something that can be done really easily with VBscript or something.

The sad part is that they are claiming that you are at risk if that happens and are making profit from it.

82.81.88.113 - Your IP Address has been Traced < Nope
Windows 95 is Your Operating System < Nope
You are in Paris, France < Nope

Yeah computer newbies will believe it and end up installing some companies program that doesn't do much except transmit the persons details across the web and eat up system resources. Luckily, this one doesn't seem to be too accurate.

Amazing that things like this used to scare me. Ah well I break my computer by myself enough as it is. I doubt someone is gonna take the time to "Hack" me for god knows what reason. All the real hackers would steal credit numbers and such I assume rather than simply mess your computer up

XXX.XXX.XXX.XXX - Your IP Address has been Traced (Right....(Not revealing the IP,duh))
Windows 2000 is Your Operating System (Oh yes)
You are in , (Oh,where's ,?It really typed it,lol!)

If ANY of the following things occur on your computer, then you need to secure it IMMEDIATELY!

* If your CD-ROM drive just ejected (Wow,it never ejected,cool,huh?)

* If a big "PRESS ENTER" page just popped up and took over your WHOLE screen when you

Not Found

The requested URL /start/ads/pop.htm was not found on this server.)

* If a program on YOUR OWN computer LAUNCHES when you click HERE! (LMAO!
ALERT!

If this message opened up in your OWN TEXT EDITOR like NOTEPAD then ANY WEBSITE can open ANY FILE on YOUR COMPUTER!

See the next example on the referring webpage for proof!

Duh, every site can do that)

* If a file from YOUR OWN computer can BE OPENED when you click HERE! (It should open c:\windows\win.ini as an example) (System can't find the desired location, something like it, cause i'm using Chinese Windows, but wait, the real answer is: 2000 isn't that folder, was it?)

* If YOUR OWN hard drive directory can be accessed from ANY WEB BROWSER. Click HERE to test. (Oh, nothing happened, oh wait, is this my computer.... *pulls the computer out of the room*)
So almost everything don't work, lol
