I'm having problems with Windows XP Pro. I have done like four clean installs of windows XP on my other computer because I was having two problems with it:

1. Windows asks me to insert the Windows CD to "replace unregognized versions of some files"
2. Windows does not boot after the while progress bar becomes full.
(It just hangs) I can't boot into safe mode either (stops at mup.dll)

But I have a feeling that this began after i finished installing all Critical updates.

Anyone heard of a solution to this?

Anyone having this problem?

PC setup:

Primary Master: 12GB (XP install here)

Primary slave: 80GB (just my files)

Secondary Master: CDR

Secondary slave: CD-RW

Half right.

I do have a pirated version, but its a clone of the XP SP1 CD, so I know its not corrupted. Also this problem was only happening recently, and I have been using this very same XP CD since SP1 came out.

I was thinking about buying it, although extortionately priced, but I know that my version is fully working, and I am pretty sure that this happened after one of the windows updates. So if I spend my money on a legal version, whats to stop me having the same problem again?

Well I reinstalled, and that seemed to solve my problems for a while. Don't know for how long though!

I'll buy XP when SP2 comes out.
