Sad thing is though that they are likely to be attacked just like Spain.

And if they go for the London underground stations...I dread to think what will happen.

And both countries stand to gain by being allies. Britain stands to have a greater influence over the US, and the US stand to influence more over the UK and Europe.

Oh and don't forget to pay homage to the cheddar cheese from there. Cali cheese is weak and orange.

Britain has been one of our strongest allies in the War on Terror and one of Bush's biggest supporters. It also sent thousands of its own troops to help out in the war in Iraq.

Without the help of the British, gaining world support would have been a much more difficult task for George W. Bush, but with its help he managed to get dozens of countries (I forget the exact number, but it was over twenty) to help us out in the ousting of a madman and making the world a safer place.

That ain't exactly world support ... over twenty countries? That's nothing. The only countries that did anything besides sign their name to a "Coalition" was the Brits and Spain, who obviously isn't quite as helpful anymore. Don't know where you get the idea that we have world support.

And how do you Brits feel about the Iraq war? I'm not gonna get into it too much here because 95% of the forum is conservative and there's no point in trying, but I just wanted a general consensus of your opinions.

There was lots of opposition to it over there. Many people support the decision though. Just like here really.

Though I doubt that Tony Blair will win the election by a landslide like he did the last two terms because of this decision.

if you knew the first thing about economics and if you actually read my post and if you actually did some research, you would find that i stated that the US's fiscal policy devalued the dollar on purpose, as this has the effect of making it cheaper for overseas countries to export from the US but it makes foreign imports more expensive for american companies, thus increasing demand for home made US goods but making the rest of the worlds goods more expensive to import, and thus lowering demand for them.

If you insist on going back to the blitz, maybe you would find it interesting to know that the US didnt help out of the goodness of your hearts, the US was happy to sit back and watch europe destroy itself, only when Pearl Harbour was attacked did you intervene. Once you did intervene you did not do it for the good of the world as a whole, the US demanded payment for its help in the war, which led to the down fall of the "british empire", sounds like a mercenary action to me. once again no flame is intended just a little reality check

SIGH....

Downfall of the empire? C'mon now. The empire was in decline since America broke free in the revolution.

The U.S. actually had a non-interference policy back then which was a result of the backlash of WW1 trench warfare and chemical warfare.

Ever heard of the bases for ships deal which proves America's president was trying to get involved BEFORE Pearl, and what of the Marshall plan to rebuild ALL of Europe after the war?

Detroyers for bases deal:

<http://www.history.navy.mil/faqs/faq59-24.htm>

Marshall Plan:

<http://www.loc.gov/exhibits/marshall/>

WW2 was probably the most selfless war America has ever fought. It was fought to preserve the democracies that existed at the time. It was not fought for economics, as our economy could survive isolation at the time, and it was not fought because we wanted the end of the british empire. We did not take over. Each country was restored, and is independent.

The empire was VOLUNTARILY dismantled by BRITAIN, using the commonwealth system. This system is still in effect, which former colonies still part of Britain. (See Bermuda) Isreal was created VOLUNTARILY by the BRITISH in one of thier former territories.

Establishment of Isreal:

<http://www.cia.gov/cia/publications/factbook/geos/is.html>

You need to read up a bit, chum.

Why do you people constantly question me? I consistently prove you wrong.

Yes. But what was that request? Bases to further support the war effort that we weren't officially in yet. And when the war was over the bases were returned to Britain, effectively GIVING the British all those ships.

And if you think the EU isn't trying to do the same thing to the rest of the world, you have no concept of economics in a capitalist society.

That idea that America is devalueing it's currency for economic gain, and leverage is absolute trash, and a total contradiction. A powerful U.S. dollar is in the best interests of America.

Why the fuck do some of you euro trash (no offense to the rest the of you) want to to whine about what is by definition OUR own internal policies yet cannot handle YOUR own internal problems without OUR involvement.

Drop the issues of penis envy already. America still has the biggest one on the block despite the EU having with HOW many countries? Sorry but the dollar is still the benchmark for the rest of the world as far as it goes wait a minue I am not sorry for for that. We worked hard for that position.

And far as not supporting GB before Pearl Harbor get it straight look at the losses suffered by a supposedly nuertal country in merchant marine before we even entered the war how about American lives lost supporting GB through the merchant marine after?

<http://www.usmm.org/sunk39-41.html#anchor325668>

and look at all the ships detained by YOUR country rpior to our entry.

How many Americans lost their lives to invade the continent again so YOU could whine about OUR economic policies. I suppose we could have done nothing and you would be still raising your arm in salute of Das Fuhrer.

So go tell it to someone who cares about your sniveling whiny attitude.

On we more thing rather than whining about it WW2 I would prefer to be thanked about saving your miserable worthless whining overly self righteous ass from singing the Horst Wessel song everyday at school.

"Of course the people don't want war. But after all, it's the leaders of the country who determine the policy, and it's always a simple matter to drag the people along whether it's a democracy, a fascist dictatorship, or a parliament, or a communist dictatorship. Voice or no voice, the people can always be brought to the bidding of the leaders. That is easy. All you have to do is tell them they are being attacked, and denounce the pacifists for lack of patriotism, and exposing the country to greater danger."

Beware the leader who bangs the drums of war in order to whip the citizenry into a patriotic fervor, for patriotism is indeed a double-edged sword. It both emboldens the blood, just as it narrows the mind. And when the drums of war have reached a fever pitch and the blood boils with hate and the mind has closed, the leader will have no need in seizing the rights of the citizenry. Rather, the citizenry, infused with fear and blinded by patriotism, will offer up all of their rights unto the leader and gladly so. How do I know? For this is what I have done. And I am Caesar.

My point? the difference between patriotism and fanatism is a fine line. Go to war because there is no longer a rational and reasonable alternative, not because someone says your being unpatriotic, or un american.

I'm not anti american, you have your good, bad and ugly just like anywhere else. Including the UK. I'll buy this war on terror story when you jail all those NORAD people for funding and supporting terrorism.

Indeed, and it still looks out of place.

longbowNo it wasn't support from the whole world, but from the most powerfull nations.
I'm sorry but this just made me laugh so hard

The most powerful nations in the world, right:

Quote:

Official US List of Nations With Official Stance in Favor of US Iraq Action

Source: US State Department

Afghanistan
Albania
Australia
Azerbaijan
Bulgaria
Colombia
The Czech Republic
Denmark
El Salvador
Eritrea
Estonia
Ethiopia
Georgia
Hungary
Italy
Japan
South Korea
Latvia
Lithuania
Macedonia
The Netherlands
Nicaragua
The Philippines
Poland
Romania
Slovakia
Spain
Turkey
United Kingdom
Uzbekistan

Note the absence of all Western European powers except the US foreign post in Europe (the UK), plus Russia, India, China, etc.....

Most powerful...right

errr...India and China are in ASIA. And just because they have a lot of population doesn't mean they're powerful. We're not the largest nation, yet we (US) are by FAR the most powerful nation in the world.

Who ever said that India and China are not in Asia?

Leave an isolationist hole and you'll find out that countries like Russia, India, China are quite powerful. Militarily for now, and economically as time goes on. The US is not as high up in the world as you think... yes, singly the most powerful military force, but when you have more than one of these powers mentioned at once, it's a different story...

My point is not that, however - my point is that the US "coalition" is nothing more than the US and the UK with some add-ons there so that they can say - "Oh - we have 30 nations on our side." And of course Eritrea and Azerbaijan, together with the superpowers of Ethiopia and El Salvador, are, as longbow says, "the most powerful nations."

The edit consisted of adding one word that was left out, and it was made before your post anyhow...
